The bridesmaids were Miss Ruth Beakley-Smith, Miss Isabel Inness, Miss Louise Hartley and Miss Dorothy Mahon. They were dressed in pink chiffon and lace over blue satin chamoise. ## "CROESUS" AMATEURISH; ROTHSCHILD PLAY FAILS

Well Advertised Production, with Arthur Bouchier Playing, Falls Very Flat.

(By Cable to The Tribune.)

London, May 23.—Baron Henri de Rothschild's much disputed and splendidly advertised play, "Croesus," produced by Arthur Bouchier at the Garrick Theatre last night, turned out to be a dismal failure. After all the excursions and alarms, the report of which filled so many columns in the newspapers, the appetites of the critics were naturally whetted, but "Croesus" proved to be not half so dramatic or exciting as the actions of the three men most interested in its fortune.

The only echo of the famous "battle of the Garrick" when Arthur Bouchier watched his victorious forces from an excellently conceived strategic position on the heights of the Beefsteak Club capture the enemy's positions after much bloodshed, was the fact that we saw some signs of an army of occupation. Commissioners guarded the entrances to boxes and policemen were stationed at various points of strategic importance. Mr. Bouchier was on the scene himself, but was struggling with adversity, for all his efforts could not make "Croesus" a strong, dramatic or convincing play.

What little story the author has to tell concerns the love of Comte Sorbier (Croesus) for Marcelle Lignery, but the thread of this little romance is conceived in the spirit of rosewater and the sentiment is quite submerged in the large texture of the dialogue. There is a huge list of characters, and everybody talks, from Croesus to the servants.

All the talk is in vague generalities. Sorbier, to illustrate his wealth, enjoys a succession of scenes in which he does out checks to people with the grace of one of man giving another a cigarette and outwits art dealers and blackmailers. All these incidents have no direct bearing upon the outcome of the play and are not conceived in the true spirit of the drama. Indeed, the whole affair is amateurish and unworthy of Mr. Bouchier's powers as an actor.

The play is in three acts, the first of which takes place in the Comtesse de Lignery's boudoir, the second in Claude Sorbier's study and the third in an apartment occupied by a typical little Parisian soubrette.

J. Salter Hansen's trial on a charge of threatening Mr. Bouchier's life comes on at Bow street this morning.

RECEPTION FOR DR. SILVERMAN.

The Independent Order of B'nai B'rith will give a reception on Thursday for the Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman, president of the Grand Lodge, in celebration of his completion of twenty-five years of activity in Jewish affairs in New York. Governor Sulzer will make an address.

RAIN BEATS "TAPS" ON ARMY GARDEN PARTY

Heavy Downpour Forces Uncle Sam's Men and Their Visitors to Break Ranks in Retreat.

DESERT ICE CREAM TENTS

Annual Fete for the Benefit of Widows and Orphans at Governor's Island, However, Is Well Attended.

Unfailing Old Probabilities: Unpatriotic Old Probabilities! to splash Miss Esther Cleveland's pretty gown with rain and force Finley J. Shepard to take refuge under one corner of his wife's blue silk parasol—just because they cared enough for their country and its protectors to go to the Army Relief Society's garden party at Governor's Island in the face of yesterday's showery sky.

My, but it was a wet ending of a brilliant day! It must be said, though, that everybody took it blithely, especially the young officers who had rubber coats and pretty girls. They had a clench—some of the onlookers called it a clinch.

Large Crowd Despite Storm.

Yesterday's party was unusually well attended—perhaps because last year, on account of the death of Major General Frederick Dent Grant, this annual festivity for the benefit of the widows and orphans of army officers and enlisted men was omitted.

Several persons sent nice advance contributions this year, among them Mrs. Russell Sage and Mrs. E. M. Parker.

Major General Thomas H. Barry and Mrs. Barry received the guests in a tent at the entrance to the park before the military programme began. Assisting them was Mrs. Charles Francis Roe, president of the New York branch of the society, Mrs. Daniel S. Lamont, national president, came later, and with her Miss Esther Cleveland, Secretary of War Garrison couldn't be there, but Mrs. Garrison came, and so did the wife of the former Secretary, Mrs. Henry L. Stimson.

It was a pretty sight during the first part of the afternoon, when the sun shone between clouds, and the massed bands of the 25th United States Infantry and several other bands, and the People's Choral Union—five hundred musicians in all—played on the big green. At 3 o'clock the rain began to fall, and the soldiers turned out and showed the visitors how they were just folding up their blankets when the shower burst, and the next military manoeuvres on the programme were executed in the midst of a pouring rain, with a melancholy fringe of spectators under dripping umbrellas.

The former Miss Helen Miller Gould and her husband arrived in the midst of the rain, and cheerfully ate ice cream under a tent, with the drops beating "taps" on the roof.

Army Mules Commandeered.

The army mules were never in such demand as they were yesterday, after it rained. Up and down and back and forth they galloped, hauling the covered army wagons filled with visitors from the ferry to the Officers' Club, where the dancing was to officers' houses, where impromptu tea parties gathered on sheltered verandas, to any place that was out of the rain. Among the guests seen in the officers' tent, besides those already mentioned, were Mrs. A. L. Mills, whose husband was in charge of militia affairs in the War Department; Mrs. Elizabeth Custer, Mrs. J. M. Lawton, Charles Irwin Wilson and Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. George Leary—whose guest Mrs. Garrison was—and tiny Miss Leary; Mrs. Le Baron Robbins, Mrs. Lamont's daughter; General George W. Wingate, and John D. Crimmins.

The booths were under the charge of the women of Governor's Island, under the direction of Mrs. Barry. The committee in charge of the arrangements included Colonel S. Mallory, Major William E. Horton and Captain John E. Woodward. It was the 25th United States Infantry that gave the drills. Mrs. Fabius M. Clark was chairman of the press.

SURE SULZER WILL HELP

Vivisection Probers Promised a Fair Hearing, Says Seligman.

Jefferson Seligman, speaking at the annual convention of the Interstate conference for the investigation of vivisection, in the Hotel Savoy yesterday, said that Governor Sulzer had assured him of sympathy and had promised to help.

"We can do nothing without the law," said Mr. Seligman; "we must have the help of the Legislature, and it begins to look as though we were at last to have a chance in Albany. A few days ago I called upon Governor Sulzer, and he not only assured me that his sympathies are with us in every way, but promises to do all he can to help us. He referred me to the new Health Commissioners, Dr. Riggs and Homer Folks, and they have promised that we shall have a fair hearing in the fall."

The following officers were elected: President, Edward H. Clement, Boston; first vice-president, the Rev. C. Ernest Smith, Washington; second vice-president, Mrs. Caroline Earl White, Philadelphia; recording secretary, Mrs. J. L. C. Henderson, Boston; corresponding secretary, Mrs. William Vanamee, Newburg, N. Y.; treasurer, Mrs. E. L. Penrose, New York City. Executive committee, Frederick P. Bellamy, Brooklyn; Mrs. Clinton Pinckney Farrell, New York City; Miss Katherine Nicholson, Philadelphia; Mrs. Emily Welton, New York City; Mrs. Ella S. Bates, Newark, N. J.; B. R. Waters, Washington, and Miss H. Gertrude Crosby, Baltimore.

STEFANSSON'S AID OFF

Second Arctic Expedition Will Start July 15.

Professor Vilhjalm Stefansson, discoverer of the blond Eskimoes, who will start this summer on another four years' exploration of Arctic regions, announced last night that Dr. R. M. Anderson, his second in command, left here last night for the Pacific Coast, where he will superintend the outfitting of the expedition. Mrs. Anderson will accompany the expedition as far north as Nome, Alaska.

The expedition, according to Professor Stefansson, will start for the Arctic region from Esquimaux, B. C., about July 15. The scientists will travel in the Katulka, a steam-sailing bark. Professor Stefansson said he would not use any wireless equipment in his approaching trip. It is Stefansson's prime object to discover a new continent which he believes lies in the Arctic Circle.

WAGNER CENTENARY

All Germany Celebrates Composer's Natal Day.

[By Cable to The Tribune.]
Berlin, May 22.—Throughout Germany to-day the 100th anniversary of Richard Wagner's birth is being celebrated. Everywhere honor is paid the great master composer.
At the Royal Theatre, where on January 7, 1844, "The Flying Dutchman" was first presented, there was a special performance of Wagnerian favorites and a speech laudatory of the composer. A public service was conducted at the foot of the Wagner monument, in the Thiergarten, which was adorned with a profusion of lovely wreaths and cut flowers. Many musical and artistic societies were represented.
In the afternoon at 5 o'clock the performance of "Die Meistersinger" commenced at the Royal Opera House.
At Leipzig, in the square fronting the main railroad depot, the cornerstone of the Wagner monument being executed by the sculptor Max Klinger was laid in the presence of a great concourse.

ITALIANS GIVE CONCERT

Performance by Reorganized Orchestral Society Peaceful.

The Italian Orchestral Society, whose troubles under its former name of Italian Philharmonic have been many, succeeded finally in giving a concert last night in Carnegie Hall. The audience was not large, but peace reigned, and no recalcitrant Italian musician exploded a bomb or even an epithet.

Any effort that may be made by Italians in America to show that their music is not confined to the theatre is to be welcomed, and in this respect last night's concert deserves praise.

Yet it is to be regretted that conditions were not different. The orchestra was a large one and spirited, and the volume of tone was admirable. Conductor Sodero had failed to polish or refine it. The Martucci symphony, a work of considerable interest, with not a little in it that was primarily Italian in spirit, though Brahms and Beethoven at times peeped round the corners, received but a rough reception.

The brass was altogether too much in evidence, and the strings, especially the cellos, had in them little sweetness, with the result that the real beauties of the work were obscured. The same fault must be found with Sinigaglia's "Danza Piemontese."

There were two soloists—Mme. Claparède-Viafora and Giuseppe Gaudenzi. The latter was a tenor, the possessor of a voice of natural brilliancy and great power, who shouted rather than sang the "Improvisi" from "Andrea Chénier" until his breath was quite gone and his face very red.

Then he tried the "Ridi Pagliaccio," with the result that he barely managed to struggle through it.

In short, such fine natural powers and such absolute lack of any idea of how to sing have rarely been exhibited of late upon any stage in this city. Yet the audience applauded him to the echo, for he was not a tenor robusto—with a vengeance.
